HULL CLEANING

The purpose of underwater hull cleaning is to remove biological roughness or fouling. A build-up of marine fouling can lead to increased drag, resulting in a detrimental impact on a vessel's hydrodynamic performance and hence the relationship between speed, power performance and fuel consumption. Fouling, particularly in the case of a prolific build-up of hard or shell fouling like barnacles or tubeworm, can cause turbulence, cavitation, and noise, frequently affecting the performance of sonars, speed logs and other hull mounted sensors.

Proper cleaning removes all traces of fouling and does not remove or damage the coating or cause any increased surface roughness. Underwater cleaning is performed either by a diver with brushes or by a remotely operated vehicle (ROV) controlled from land.

Applicability and assumptions

Hull cleaning is applicable for all vessel types and ages. Depending on the degree and type of fouling to be removed a diver can typically clean 200 to 400 m² per hour of flat surfaces (less on the bow and stern areas). The operation will be performed during normal ship stops (bunkering, anchorage, waiting for canal passage, etc.). The fuel reductions depend on the extent to which the hull is fouled.

Cost of implementation

The price of hull cleaning will depend on the selection between a diver and a ROV, in addition to the vessel size.

Reduction potential

Depending on the degree of marine fouling, vessel size, vessel segment, operation profile and trading areas a reduction in the range of 1% to 5 % on main engine fuel consumption can be expected.

UNDERWATER HULL CLEANING

The dirty hull of the vessel develops a high hydrodynamic resistance, this results in a high stresses main machines and wear, an increase in the consumption of the fuel and an increase in the operating costs of the vessel. So, in order to have low operating costs it would be good all surfaces of the ship that come into contact with water are clean and smooth.

We use specially constructed 4X4 brush cart with ability clean 2500sqm/h and many different brushes for silicone antifouling paint and different level of fouling to get the best possible result and to make the hull cleaning without damages on the coating of the vessel.

We help to preserve lives and keep commercial operators on track to meet their deadlines through our bunkering operations – refuelling ocean-going vessels or fixed structures in deep water

MARINE FUELS AND LUBRICANTS

We have a simple goal as your supplier – to provide high-quality fuel bunkering at a competitive price to support your business today and in the future. Choose us as your partner and you have a strong and positive ally in your quest to operate profitably and successfully.

MODERN FLEETS

We supply a broad range of fuels and lubricants to shipping and rig operators. A growing number of customers, from major energy businesses and logistics companies to local fishing businesses, choose Puma Energy to meet their offshore refuelling needs. They trust our service capability and our products. The term ‘bunker’ for ship oil originated in the days of steam ships when coal was kept in bunkers. Today, our modern fleet of bunker barges fuels container ships, tankers, and fishing vessels, often at short notice. We can offer our customers everything they require from a bunker supplier, including high-specification products such as Castrol Marine lubricants

REDUCED REFUELLING TIME

To minimise layovers and to maximise sailing time, we maintain fully stocked barges close to shipping lanes, and their powerful pumps reduce refuelling times by up to 50%. These highly specialised and advanced bunker barges have also increased safety to new levels. Some of our barges have also been specially adapted to service huge deep-water rigs and moored vessels offshore. Their high-pressure pumps deliver fuels at a faster speed and make use of dynamic positioning systems to maintain a safe connection to our customers facilities or

BUNKERING SERVICES

King shipping trading maritime services limited is an integrated group energy company like no other. When we say we fuel journeys, we are not just talking about putting gasoline or diesel in your tank or providing high quality fuel to some of the world's largest airlines, shipping companies and power suppliers. It goes further than that. For us, Fuelling Journeys is about making a real difference to all our customers

We manage and operate our fleet of water barges for the delivery supply. We grow and continue renewing our well-maintained fleet and have a fleet maintenance programmed to uphold our high service standard.

We are one of the leading fresh water supply operators in Lagos, Togo. Not only because of the sheer size of our organization, fleet, and client portfolio, but also because of our commitment in quality and services.

Our work team is comprised of professionals from ship management and shipping agency disciplines. We have offices in Lagos, Cotonou, Togo and Tema, Ghana.

FRESH WATER SUPPLY

Arrangements can be easily made to supply vessels with whatever quantities of fresh water required. Supply is usually done by means of special barges, for vessels berthing inside port, or at anchorage area as per ship's standing position and circumstance. Notice must be given 24 hours prior to ship's arrival so that pre-arrangements can be completed. Cost of water supplies differ from one port to another and according to the place vessel is anchored inside the port.
